

Making its Mark

Construction is more than 80 percent complete on The Mark, the cosmopolitan condominium community by Toll Brothers located adjacent to the Hotel Valley Ho on Main and 69th streets. The property includes 85 condominium homes and two penthouses with prices starting in the $400,000s. An on-site sales center is scheduled to open this month; the first residents are scheduled for move-in mid-2008.

Cultivating a Cure

Phoenix-based Gallagher & Kennedy, P.A., a full-service business law firm, recently raised $30,000 for the Susan G. Komen for the Cure Foundation — doubling the firm's efforts from the previous year. Proceeds came from a massive bake sale, live auction, potluck and casino-style spin wheel, as well as a 59-member Gallagher & Kennedy team that took to the streets in October for the Komen Race for the Cure.

Drive-By Art

David Hovey, world-renowned architect and mastermind behind the Optima Camelview Village design, recently unveiled another creation — Sundance, a public display sculpture on the northwest corner of Scottsdale Road and Highland Avenue, as part of the city's public art collection. The sculpture, which stands 21 feet tall and is created out of cantilevered steel, presents a surprisingly bright contrast to the earthy tones of the Optima Camelview Building.

Boat Loads of Fun

Each year after-school clubs, youth groups, boys' and girls' scout troops, families and individuals paddle their home-built cardboard boats out onto the Tempe Town Lake's 200-yard race course. This year's event, the ninth annual Rotary River Rally featuring the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta, will be held in Tempe on April 18. To help participants prepare, free boat building clinics are available to discuss the concepts, math, physics, designs and strategies of boat-building. Dates are Jan. 12, Feb. 9 and March 1. 480.905.5944, rotaryriverrally.com
